Joe Stock, a citizen of Burlington, Wis., was instantly killed by train No. 1, going north on the Soo line at 3:30 a week ago Sunday morning. How the accident happened will never be known. The engineer did not see the man and had no knowledge of the accident until notified later in the day, after traces of blood had been found on the front of the engine.

Milburn Bros., contractors, poured 1,072 feet of eighteen foot cement on Route 19 between Woodstock and Crystal Lake last Friday. This run the largest made by the company since it started its contract, was accomplished in 11 hours.

Two weeks ago the gang working from Harvard poured 988 feet in one day of 11 hours in the road from Harvard to Walworth. The Milburns operate with six big mixers, which means an utmost capacity of about 1,000 feet in 10 hours.

On the Woodstock-McHenry road Gertz & Son poured the cement on the Linden corner Friday. This was a difficult turn, because it is two feet wider than the balance of the road.

The many friends of Miss Lucy J. Jurson, who for twenty-seven years has been the efficient superintendent of the Lake Bluff orphanage, will regret to learn that on account of impaired health she is forced to give up the work. As a slight recognition of the service she has given, the orphanage auxiliary gave an informal reception in her honor, at the orphanage, Lake Bluff, on Sunday, July 27 from 3 to 7 p. m. (day light saving time). A short program will be rendered, light refreshments served, and a purse presented. All her friends are invited.

A number of the summer home owners along the east shore of Fox river, south of McHenry including Emerald Park, are now enjoying the conveniences afforded by electricity. The line along this stretch of the river was completed a short time ago and connections are now being made. Another extension of the service is also being made along the west shore of Fox river, north of the Johnsons bridge. Needless to say that the resorters are very much pleased over the acquisition of this convenience.

The McHenry-Volo cement road, recently opened for travel, was again closed this week this action having undoubtedly been found necessary on account of the recklessness of some of the automobile drivers. The road is now closed from seven o'clock in the morning until six in the evening. Just as a matter of safeguarding the job. There has been so much interference with the progress of the work on account of careless and thoughtless motorists that it has been deemed best to keep the road closed hereafter until the completion of the job. The shoring work has now reached a point just this side of Lily Lake and it will probably be another three weeks before the work is completed.

A band of Gypsies were in the act of kidnapping the little son of Louis Bublitz at Prairie View, Thursday afternoon, when their daring act was frustrated by F. W. Stancil, a farmer residing north of that village.

Mr. Stancil heard the screams of the boy and saw the Gypsies pick him up by his hands and feet. He was working in a field nearby and started toward the gypsies.

When they saw him coming, they dropped the boy and hurried to their vehicles and made a quick get-away before he could notify the authorities.

The Bublitz family reside in the section house at the edge of the village, the father being a section hand. The boy was walking to the home of his uncle, William Horenberger, who lives on the Half-Day-Prairie View road, when he encountered the gypsies, who had stopped along the road a short distance north of Prairie View.

The boy was so badly frightened by his experience that he had difficulty in telling about it. Persons doubted his story until Mr. Stancil verified it.

E. V. Orvis Makes Record Fish Catch

The thirty-two pound muscullonge which E. V. Orvis caught at Twin Lakes, Wis., a few days ago is being mounted by the Waukegan man and will be brought back by him as proof positive that he can lay claim to catching the largest fish of the kind ever credited to a local man, so far as is known. The picture of the fish, as displayed in the Sun office window has created much comment. BASSETT, WIS., MAN WINS FORD AT CARNIVAL

The Firemen's Carnival at Winch's Channel Lake Pavilion last Friday evening was a huge success. There were over 1000 people in attendance.

The crowd started to come quite early and by 9 o'clock the carnival was well under way and a great time was being had by all.

The concessions did a good business as did the side shows held by the firemen themselves.

The music seemed to be especially good. The fire boys certainly appreciate the kindness of Mr. Winch in the donation of the pavilion for the occasion and the donation of the "Senators" with their excellent music.

The firemen distributed souvenirs in the forms of headress of all kinds and with the donning of these the party took on the aspect of a real carnival. With the colored lights on the pavilion the dancers made a very pretty sight and it was noticeable that many of their older folks took on the spirit of the occasion and lingered until almost the end.

The boys are highly elated over the success of the affair and the returns show that they will clear more than $650.

The Ford raffled off was won by Gilbert Kerkhoff of Bassett, Wis. The cake raffled was won by Fred Sheehan.

Antioch Easily Defeat Crack Indiana Team

Antioch easily defeated the crack Fort Worth, (Ind.) Collegians Sunday to the tune of 10 to 4.

The Collegians got lost in this neck of the woods and were late arriving at the ball grounds and it was after 3 o'clock before the game got under way.

The visitors were easily retired in the first, as were the Antioch boys, and everyone settled back to see a tight game of ball, especially when the collegians were again retired in one-two-three order in the second.

In Antioch's half of the second the break came. Ed Vos, first man up was an easy out. Carbon, who hails from Kenosha and played a good game at short was the next man up and landed safely. George Flala followed with another safe hit. Louie Flala then lined one to left scoring Carbon and his brother. Red Fields was safe on a scratch hit. Thompson hit one behind third and was safe, filling the bases. Hostetter slammed to short and Louie Flala was nabbed at the plate, but the bases were again filled. Bernie Fields took a couple of strikes before he found the ball to his liking and socked it over the centerfielders head for two bases and scoring three runs. Bob Wilton closed the inning by whiffing.

Antioch put across another run in the half when Vos reached first, Carbon walked and George Flala hit safely sending Vos home. The visitors then retired L. Flala, Fields and Hostetter.

The fourth was the same story for the collegians. With two down Thompson walked his first man the next man up got a hit placing a man on first and third. On the first ball pitched the man on first made for second and "Red" Fields and Carbon worked the short throw to perfection, getting their man on third standing up.

The local team added another score in their half of the fourth when Bernie Fields, Wilton and Vos hit safely, the visitors retiring the next three men.

The fifth brought the collegians their first run on a walk and a hit. Antioch failed to score in the next three innings, but the visitors managed to put across three runs in the seventh, followed by three runs in the eighth by Antioch when Kohen walked, Wilton hit, Vos doubled, sending in Kohen and Wilton and Vos scored on an out. This ended the scoring.

Antioch 0 5 1 1 0 0 0 5 0 - 10

Thompson for Antioch pitched a wonderful game and at no time was in trouble. He struck out nine men and only walked two and allowed but five hits. The home team tallied 15 hits.

Antioch will play an all star Lake County team next Sunday, and it is hoped a large crowd will be on hand to give the local boys some encouragement.

J. G. E. Puerkel Has Narrow Escape on Road

John G. E. Puerkel, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Campbell of Antioch, prominent Chicago lawyer escaped serious injury Saturday afternoon when his car turned complete turtle.

The accident happened just south of Half Day. Mr. Puerkel was on his way to Antioch to visit Mrs. Puerkel, who has been convalescing at the home of her parents here.

According to Mr. Puerkel the accident was caused by a Ford car attempting to pass a string of cars going south and forcing Mr. Puerkel to either hit it head on or turn off into the slippery clay. He took the latter course and his car skidded and turned turtle landing in an upright position.

Mr. Puerkel very fortunately escaped with a few minor cuts and bruises.

The Ford car continued on its way. Mr. and Mrs. Puerkel had planned to leave the following Sunday for Northern Wisconsin.

WHERE IS THE SUPPORT?

A little group of Antioch baseball boosters, rather than see Antioch without the national pastime, reorganized a team this year composed of practically all local men.

This team to date has proven its ability to uphold Antioch on the diamond. Not professionals by any means, but with the ability to play ball, and real ball. Defeated but twice, both with close scores, one an 11-inning game and both defeats due to breaks of the game, this team has shown its calibre in the manner and ease in which it has defeated some real ball teams. The easy victory they had Sunday over the much touted Fort Wayne, (Ind.) Collegians was not luck. It was a superior bunch of ball players defeating an inferior team.

But of what good is this team to Antioch? It is not supported. These ball players from a distance do not travel miles to play ball. Some one has to pay their expenses. Many of these teams demand as high as $125 a game. Does Antioch expect this little group of three or four men to continue to contribute heavily for the sake of advertising Antioch in the baseball world?

And what of the group of Antioch ball players. Does the public expect them to get out in the hot sun on a Sunday and play ball for their amusement without a little compensation, and they do not demand or ask professional wages.

By calling a spade a spade it amounts to this. There will either have to be better support or Antioch will disappear as a baseball town. The men who are putting their efforts into making Antioch a contender for baseball title have come to the end of their rope.

There is but one course open for the present management. They will play out a schedule of two more games at home and lack of support for these two games will mean this, that is as far as Antioch is concerned. The management has many inducements to take the team traveling and to allow these boys to make a little money for their efforts. It is ridiculous to think that a manager has to take its team out of its own town in order to make its expenses, but nevertheless its true.

So to make a long story short, if Antioch is interested in having a ball team it will be appreciated if it shows it the next two Sundays.

Bring the wife. Yes, the kids, and see if we can't keep our team at home.

Inquest of Crossing Death Held Thursday

Adjourn Until Further Data on Grade Crossing Is Heard

The inquest held Thursday night over the accidental death of Max Schoenfeld a week ago Tuesday night at the Lake Villa crossing took on the nature of an inquiry into the conditions of this particular crossing for public safety.

The coroner's jury composed of Wm. Walker, Sr., Fred Burke, Geo. Wedge, Albert Kapple, George McCredie and Frank T. Fowler as foreman, had requested the presence of certain men who could throw light on the conditions of this crossing.

The inquest opened with the questioning of witnesses and participants of the accident. Dr. Beebe testified that the man was dead when brought to his office and that death had probably been instantaneous from a fracture at the back of the head.

Harry Wise, who was with the deceased on the truck, claimed that he did not hear or see the approaching train until it was directly upon them and did not remember whether he jumped or was thrown by the impact of the train with the truck. He said that they were proceeding very slowly due to the road condition and the load that they had on the truck.

Sam Block and Mr. Goodbody, employees of the Great Lakes Jobbing Co., of Waukegan, with a store in Antioch, were the first people to arrive at the scene of the accident, claims that they actually saw the train hit the truck, they could not remember seeing or hearing the train in its approach to the crossing. A review of the position that these men were in according to their testimony, shows that it would be impossible for them to see the approaching train on account of the trees.

The engineer of the train, Mr. Cook was called to the stand and he claims that he saw the truck at a distance of probably 40 feet from crossing and that he blew his whistle. Mr. Cook was questioned very closely by the foreman of the jury and it was after some sharp questions that the engineer admitted that he actually saw the engine hit the truck.

The foreman then called for the firemen of the engine and the reply of Mr. Harrington to the cause of his none appearance caused considerable surprise among the jury. Mr. Harrington's reply to the coroner's question as to why the firemen had not put in an appearance was that "his" appearance wouldn't justify the expense." The jury then called for the principals concerned in the condition of the crossing. Mr. Russell, county superintendent of highways, was called to the stand and was excused when he informed the jury that his knowledge of the status of the grade crossing was not complete and that Mr. Erisman of the State Highway department who was present would be more informed than he.

Mr. Erisman was then called to the stand. He testified that the state had not made much progress in the separation of the grades at this point on account of the continued protest of the Soo Line that the expense was too great.

Mr. Erisman also testified that final steps had been taken in this matter when the state had sent an estimate of the cost and plans for the separation of grades to the Soo Line last March and that these plans had been turned down by Mr. Whitman, engineer of the Soo Line, on the same plea that the expense was too much and that the Soo Line did not have the money to finance the improvement. Mr. Erisman then said that the state took its next step by petitioning the commerce commission for action on this matter. He said the papers had already been filed with that commission. Mr. Erisman testified that the improvement totalled a cost of $87,000.

The coroner's jury at this point showed irregularities of reports on this question and called on the coroner to see if Mr. Whitman could appear at a future meeting of the inquest.

CHAPTER XII

The window was gray with the light of dawn before Grant's mind had calmed down enough for sleep. When Linder awoke him it was noon.

"You sleep well on your Big Idea," was his comment.

"No better than you did last night," retorted Grant, springing out of bed. "Let me see . . . yes, I still have it clearly. I'll tell you about it sometime, if you can stay awake. When do we eat?"

"Now, or as soon as you are presentable. I've a notion to give you three days' C.B. for appearing on parade in your pajamas."

"Make it a cash fine, sergeant, old dear, and pay it out of what you owe me. Now that that is settled order up a decent meal. I'll be shaved and dressed long before it arrives. You know this is a first-class hotel, where prompt service would not be tolerated."

As they ate together Grant showed no disposition to discuss what Linder called his Big Idea, nor yet to give any satisfaction in response to his companion's somewhat pointed references as to his doings of the night before.

"There are times, Linder," he said, "when my soul craves solitude. You, being a sergeant, and therefore having no soul, will not be able to understand that longing for contemplation—"

"It's all right," said Linder. "I don't want her."

"Furthermore," Grant continued, "tonight I mean to resume my soliloquies, and your absence will be much in demand."

"The supply will be equal to the demand."

"Good! Here are some morsels of money. If you will buy our railway tickets and settle with the chief extortionist downstairs, I will join you at the night train going west."

Linder sprang to attention, gave a salute in which mock deference could not entirely obscure the respect beneath, and set about on his commissions, while Grant devoted the afternoon to a session with Murdoch and Jones, but it was noted that Grant's interest centered more in a certain telephone call than in the very gratifying financial statement which Murdoch was able to place before him. And it was probably as a result of that telephone call that a taxi drew up in front of Murdoch's home at exactly six-thirty that evening and bore Miss Phyllis Bruce and an officer wearing a captain's uniform in the direction of the best hotel in the city.

The dining room was sweet with the perfume of flowers, and soft strains of music stole vaguely about its high arching pillars, mingling with the chatter of lovely women and of men to whom expense was no consideration. Grant was conscious of a delicious sense of intimacy as he helped Phyllis remove her wraps and seated himself by her at a secluded corner table.

"By Jove!" he exclaimed. "I don't make compliments for exercise, but you do, look stunning tonight!"

A warmth of color lit up her cheek—he had noticed at Murdoch's how pale she was—and her eyes laughed back at him with some of their old-time vivacity.

"I am so glad," she said. "It seems almost like old times—"

They gave their orders, and sat in silence through an overture. Grant was delighting himself simply in her presence, and guessed that for her part she could not retract the confession her love had wrung from her so long ago.

"There are some things which don't change, Phyllis," he said, when the orchestra had ceased.

She looked back at him with eyes moist and dreamy. "I know," she murmured.

There seemed no reason why Grant should not there and then have laid himself, figuratively, at her feet. And there was not any reason—only one. He wanted first to go West. He almost hoped that out there some light of disillusionment would fall about him; that some sudden experience would readjust his personality in accordance with the inevitable.

"I asked you to dine with me tonight," he heard himself saying, "for two reasons: first, for the delight of your exquisite companionship; and second, because I want to talk over with you some plans I have for the future. The fact is, I have been in a dilemma. I find that Murdoch, like the canny old Scot he is, has doubled my fortune during my little engagement overseas, and now I have to take up the reins again. But I am filled with the West. Do you know what I mean?"

"I have never lived in the West," said Phyllis, "but I think I can guess. You're homesick for it."

"That's it—homesick for it—for the smell of a thousand miles of grass, and sunny hillsides dotted with cattle, and fellows who take you for what you are—or don't take you at all. A broker's life, no matter how successful, has nothing to offer which compares with that. It wasn't until last night that I saw it clearly, and then, all of a sudden, I knew what I was going to do."

Grant plunged into an explanation of what Linder had called his "Big

Grant Plunged Into an Explanation of What Linder Had Called His "Big Idea."

Idea." He was going back to the ranching country to buy land and start a farm on a large scale. He believed he could make money out of it, but more attractive was the prospect of outdoor life and an opportunity to offer employment to many of the boys of his battalion who, upon their return home, had not found their fortunes doubled—if they had any fortunes to double. Besides, it would give him a chance to take care of Linder.

"You know, I've got to take care of Linder," he explained, "and it's a business that has to be done tactfully. In some respects Linder is as approachable as a porcupine. I can buy him a meal or so and get away with it, but if he thought I were supporting him out of charity he would start an insurrection. Now, I'm going to make him manager of the farm; the stars in their courses shaped him for just that job. As for me, I'll stay in the background. I want time to loaf and invite my soul."

They talked over many angles of the "Big Idea," and, even after he had talked himself out, Grant continued to sit at the little table, reveling in the happiness of a man who feels that he has been called to some purpose worth while. His companion hesitated to interrupt his thoughts; her somewhat drab business experience made her pessimistic toward all idealism, and yet she felt that here, surely, was a man who could carry almost any project through to success. The unique quality in him, which distinguished him from any other man she had ever known, was his complete unselfishness. In all his undertakings he coveted no reward for himself; he was seeking only the common good.

"If all men were like you there would be no problems," she murmured, and while he could not accept the words quite at par they rang very pleasantly in his ears.

A movement among the diners reminded him of the flight of time, and with a glance at his watch he sprang up in surprise. "I had no idea the evening had gone!" he exclaimed. "I have just time to see you home and get back to catch my train."

He called a taxi and accompanied her into it. They seated themselves together, and the fragrance of her presence was very sweet about him. It would have been so easy to forget—all that he had been trying to forget—in the intoxication of such environment. Surely it was not necessary that he should go West—that he should see her again—in order to be sure.

"Phyllis," he breathed, "do you imagine I could undertake these things if I cared only for myself—if it were not that I longed for someone's approval—for someone to be proud of me? The strongest man is weak enough for that, and the strongest man is stronger when he knows that the woman he loves—"

He would have taken her in his arms, but she resisted, gently, firmly. "You have made me think too much of you, Dennison," she whispered. . . . On the way West Grant gradually unfolded his plan to Linder, who accepted it with his customary stolidity.

"You are to go on with the physical work at once," he told him. "Buy the horses, tractors, machinery; break up the land, fence it, build the houses and barns; in short, you are to superintend everything that is done with muscle or its substitute. I will bring Murdoch out shortly to take charge of the clerical details and the general organization. As for myself, after I have bought the land and made the necessary funds available, I propose to keep out of the limelight. I will be the heart of the undertaking; Murdoch will be the head, and you are to be the hands, and I hope you two conspirators won't give me palpitation."

Linder assented, laconically. "What are you going to do?" he inquired.

"I'm going to buy a half section of my own and farm if I feel like it."

The two friends discussed at great length the details of the Big Idea, and upon arrival in the West, Linder lost no time in preparing blueprints and charts descriptive of the improvements to be made on the land and the order in which the work was to be carried on. Grant bought a tract suitable to his purpose, and the wheels of the machine were set in motion. When this had been done Grant turned to the working out of his own individual experiment.

During the period in which these arrangements were being made it was inevitable that Grant should have heard more or less of Transley. He had not gone out of his way to seek information of the contractor, but it rather had been forced upon him. Transley's name was frequently heard in the offices of the business men with whom he had to do; it was mentioned in local papers with the regularity peculiar to celebrities in comparatively small centers. Transley, it appeared, had become something of a power in the land. Backed by old Y.D.'s capital, he had carried some rather daring ventures through to success. He had seized the panicky moments following the outbreak of the war to buy heavily on the wheat and cattle markets, and increases in prices due to the world's demand for food had made him one of the wealthy men of the city. The desire of many young farmers to enlist had also afforded an opportunity to acquire their holdings for small considerations, and Transley had proved his patriotism by facilitating the ambitions of as many men in this position as came to his attention. The fact that even before the war ended the farms which he acquired in this way were worth several times the price he paid was only an incident in the transactions.

But no word of Transley's domestic affairs reached Grant, who told himself that he had ceased to be interested in them, but kept an alert ear nevertheless. It would seem that Transley rather eclipsed his wife in the public eye.

So Grant set about with the development of his own farm, and kept his mind occupied with it and with his larger experiment—except when it went flitting with thoughts of Phyllis Bruce. He had written to Murdoch to engage Phyllis at any price and bring her West with him. She would be needed in the new business. He had intimated that the change would be permanent, and that it might be well to bring the family.

He selected a farm where a ridge of foothills overlooked a broad valley receding into the mountains. The dealer had no idea of selling him this particular piece of land; they were bound for a half section farther up the slope when Grant stopped on the brow of the hill to feast his eyes on the scene that lay before him. It burst upon him with the unexpectedness peculiar to the foothill valleys; miles of gently undulating plain, lying apparently far below, but in reality rising in a sharp ascent toward the snow-capped mountains looking down silently through their gauze of blue-purple afternoon mist. At distances which even his trained eye would not attempt to compute lay little round lakes like silver coins on the surface of the prairie; here and there were dark green bluffs of spruce; to the right a ribbon of river, blue-green save where the rapids churned it white, and along its edge a fringe of leafy cottonwoods; at vast intervals square black plots of plowed land like sections on a chessboard of the gods, and farm buildings cut so clear in the mountain atmosphere that the sense of space was lost and they seemed like child-houses just across the way.

Grant turned to his companion with an animation on his face which almost startled the prosaic dealer in real estate.

"Wonderful! Wonderful!" he exclaimed. "We don't need to go any farther if you can sell me this."

"Sure I can sell you this," said the dealer, looking at him somewhat queerly. "That is, if you want it. I thought you were looking for a wheat farm."

The man's total lack of appreciation irritated Grant unreasonably. "What fills the belly," he retorted, "but sunsets keep alive the soul. What is the price?"

Again the dealer gave him a queer sidelong look, and made as though to argue with him, then suddenly seemed to change his purpose. Perhaps he reflected that strange things happened to the boys overseas.

"I'll get you the price in town," he said. "You are sure it will suit?"

"Suit? No king in Christendom has his palace on a site like this. I'd go round the world for it."

"You're the doctor," said the dealer, turning his car.

Grant completed the purchase, ordered lumber for a house and barn, and engaged a carpenter to superintend the construction. It was one of his whims that he would do most of the work himself.

"I guess I'm rather a man of whims," he reflected, as he stood on the brow of the hill where the material for his buildings had been delivered. "It was a whim which first brought me West again. I have a whim about my buildings. I do not do as other people do, which is the unpardonable sin. To Linder I am a jester, to Murdoch a fanatic, to our friend the real estate dealer a fool; I even noticed my honest carpenter trying to ask me something about shell shock! Well—they're my whims, and I got an immense amount of satisfaction out of them."

The days that followed were the happiest Grant had known since childhood. The carpenter, a thin, twisted man, bowed with much labor at the bench, and answering to the name Peter, sold his services by the day and manifested a sympathy amounting to an indulgence toward the whims of his employer. So long as the wages were sure Peter cared not whether the house was finished this year or next—or not at all. He enjoyed Grant's cooking in the temporary workshop they had built; he enjoyed Grant's stories of funny incidents of the war which would crop out at unexpected moments, and which were always good for a new pipe and a few minutes' rest; he even essayed certain flights of his own, which showed that Peter was a creature not entirely without humor. He developed an appreciation of scenery; he would stand for long intervals gazing across the valley. Grant was not deceived by these little devices, but he never took Peter to task for his loitering. "If the old dodger isn't quite paying his way now, no doubt he has more than paid it many times in the past," he mused. "This is an occasion upon which to temper justice with mercy."

But it was in the planning and building of the house he found his real delight. He laid it out on very modest lines, as became the amount of money he was prepared to spend. It was to be a single-story bungalow, with veranda round the south and west. The living-room ran across the south side; into its east wall he built a capacious fireplace, with narrow slits of windows to right and left, and in the western wall were deep French windows commanding the magic of the view across the valley. The dining-room, too, faced to the west, with more French windows to let in sun and soul. The kitchen was to the east, and off the kitchen lay Grant's bedroom, facing also to the east, as became a man who rises early for his day's labor. And then facing the west, and opening off the dining-room, was what he was pleased to call his whim-room.

The idea of the whim-room came upon him as he was working out plans on the smooth side of a board, and thinking about things in general, and a good deal about Phyllis Bruce, who had just arrived from the East, and wondering if he should ever run across her Transley. It struck him all of a sudden, as had the Big Idea that night when he was on his way home from Murdoch's house. He worked it out surreptitiously, not allowing even old Peter to see it until he had made it into his plan, and then he described it just as the whim-room. But it was to be by all means the best room in the house; special finishing and flooring lumber were to be bought for it; the fireplace had to be done in a peculiarly delicate tile; the French windows must be high and wide and of the most brilliant transparency. . . .

The ring of the saw, the trill of the plane, the thwack of the hammer, were very pleasant music in his ears. Day by day he watched his dwelling grow with the infinite joy of creating, and night after night he crept with Peter into the workshop and slept the sleep of a man tired and contented. In the long summer evenings the sunlight hung like a champagne curtain over the mountains even after bedtime, and Grant had to cut a hole in the wall of the shed that he might watch the dying colors of the day fade from crimson to purple to blue on the tassels of cloud-wrath floating in the western sky. At times Linder and Murdoch would visit him to report progress on the Big Idea, and the three would sit on a bench in the half-built house, sweet with the fragrance of new sawdust, and smoke placidly while they determined matters of policy or administration.

The famous boys choir of the Trinity Episcopal church of Chicago will have charge of the music at the morning service of worship. The boys and their leaders are vacationing at Sylvan Beach, and volunteered their services. This is a fine spirit of service which we greatly appreciate.

They will render two anthems. They are assisted by two soloists, Mr. W. Shauler and Mr. R. Fenton. The choirmaster is Mr. Geo. Wallace, and the organist is Mr. R. F. Auschutz. Will you please help us make it possible to extend this privilege to our community by spreading this notice.

No prayer meeting this week, as the pastor is in camp with the Boy Scouts.

The services will be held next Sunday morning as usual. In the afternoon there will be a Sunday School convention at Millburn for the towns of Lake Villa, Millburn and Antioch. You are expected to be there. It will begin at 2:30 and close at 5. Every effort is being made to make this of permanent value. Give some one a ride over in your car.

AMERICA'S AMAZING PROGRESS IN THE PAST HUNDRED YEARS

Material Progress Staggers the Imagination, but Real Wealth Is in the Character of the People Inherited From the Pilgrim Fathers.

By WALTER W. HEAD, President The American Bankers Association

One hundred years ago when Lafayette re-visited America, he found the United States a nation of little more than ten million people—less than one-tenth of the present number. The territory embraced less than 1,800,000 square miles instead of the present 3,700,000. Half was still a wilderness of unsettled plain, plateau and mountains.

Only one hundred years ago, the world was still agog over the recent passage of the "Savannah," an American sailing vessel equipped with paddle-wheels propelled by steam, from New York to Liverpool in twenty-six days. Today we boast of a trans-Atlantic airplane crossing that required but few more hours than the "Savannah" required days.

One hundred years ago the total national wealth was less than a billion dollars, less than $100 per capita; today the national wealth exceeds 300 billion dollars—an average of almost $3,000 per capita. In 1821 there were ten savings banks with 8,635 depositors, with $1,138,000 on deposit; one hundred years later—more than thirty million depositors had more than $18,000,000,000 savings deposits. The total receipts of the federal government in 1823 were $20,500,000, the total expenditures were $14,700,000. Last year our national income and expenditures each exceeded $2,500,000,000.

One hundred years ago there were no railroads, no automobiles, no airplanes. There were no telephones, no telegraph lines, no cables. There was no gasoline, no kerosene.

There are those among us who regard the present as a period confronted with unprecedented problems, a period beset by perils heretofore unequalled. There are those who express doubt of our ability to make further progress—some even who profess to foresee the destruction and disintegration of our social, political and economic structure. In the light of achievements that have been wrought in the past by firm adherence to true principles, in the light of the tremendous resources our country now controls, what justification can men have today for expressing doubt of America's future?

America's Resources Today

We have today 110,000,000 people. Our total bank deposits aggregate approximately 40 billion dollars. Outstanding life insurance amounts to more than 70 billion dollars. Our 500 million acres of improved farm lands are valued at 77 billion dollars. We have wealth untold in our forests, in our mines of iron and coal. We have more than 250,000 miles of railroad with which to transport ourselves and our articles of commerce; we have more than 250,000 miles of commercial telegraph lines and 800,000 miles of telephone lines to afford us communication; we have 20,000 daily and weekly newspapers to disseminate information and to bind our

The Character of Our People

From it have come the patience and the wisdom which have reconciled effective authority and adequate liberty. From it has come the tolerance which has preserved freedom of speech, of press and of pulpit. From it has come the foresight which established free public schools. From it has come the courage which commanded adherence to principle at the cost of selfish gain, even at the cost of life itself. From it has come the respect for the rights and privileges of one's fellow man which has found expression in guarantees of equal representation and universal suffrage.

The character of our people is a spring which has never run dry. It has had its source ever and always in the stern and firm faith of the Pilgrim fathers—a political faith based upon and grounded in the tenets of the Christian religion. Despite every other influence, the strong and steady current of the Pilgrim's faith has persisted through generation after generation.

It is this invaluable resource—the capacity and character of our people—that has made America great in the past, that will make America greater and more powerful in the future. As long as we uphold our established standards of belief and conduct, we need have no fear for the future of America.

AGRICULTURE CLUB FOUR

PROVES A SUCCESS

A new departure in the way of a Project Tour for students of Vocational Agriculture was made on July 15th. The boys met at the Antioch Township high school at 1:00 p. m., and their first stop was at the University of Illinois Experiment Field on the George White farm east of Antioch. A. L. Lang of the University explained in detail the experiment in progress at the Antioch Field. This field was laid out in 1902 and shows the effect of phosphorus applications upon 22 years of continuous cropping. Wheat yields are almost doubled where phosphorus had been applied. Similar experiments with corn, oats, and clover are also in progress on the field. After the demonstration, the boys and the farmers retired in the shade of a giant hickory and listened for a full hour to Professor F. C. Power of the College of Agriculture

His topic, "The Business of Farming and Its Relation to Soil Improvement" was of great interest as shown by the discussion brought out after the talk. Dr. Bauer paid tribute to the late C. Hopkins, who was known by many that were present.

Later the boys inspected the excellent garden project owned by Emil Hallwas. Thanks for the peas Emil, Leslie Palmer's potato patch was reviewed next. The use of a 3-12-4 fertilizer on some of the rows shows a marked difference in the growth of the vines. Palmer hopes to dig up a gold mine in his patch next fall.

A Horse Shoe Pitching Tournament was the last on the program. The tournament grew to a high pitch of excitement when the winners of the various groups fought for final placings. Emil Hallwas and Richard Kennedy won the tournament. How about it boys, shall they hold the championship? Let's practice up a bit.

PRISCILLA DEAN NEARLY

LOSES LIFE IN MINE BLAST

Getting "the real thing" unexpectedly nearly cost the life of Priscilla Dean in the filming of the Hobart Henley Universal-Jewel special, "The Flame of Life," which will be seen at the Crystal Theatre next Saturday.

Miles of underground tunnels of a temporary nature and deep shafts were constructed for the story, which concerns the people of a mining village in North England. A whole mining town was built.

In the tunnel coal and coal dust was carefully deposited, some of the dust covering all, and big ledges of coal were inserted in the walls.

Thrilling scenes of the picture show the explosion of as in the mine, "fire damp," when a miner exposes his light and smokes, followed by "black damp," the deadly gas of the mines.

In the midst of the filming of the scenes preliminary to the actual explosion, the coal in the tunnels, laid three weeks before, produced a gas which was suddenly ignited when a technical man lit his pipe.

Whole sections of the temporary frame work in the tunnels were shattered and caught fire. Earth cracked and chunks fell, but luckily the tunnel in which they were working did not cave in. It was an escape by a miracle, the closest the star or her director, Hobart Henley, had seen.

News Briefs of Interest to Community

Federal agents seeking "hip liquor" raided some of the dance halls at Delavan Lake a week ago Saturday evening and gave the dancers a very uncomfortable half hour. At one place near Spring Lawn they are said to have taken fourteen young men on whom they found bottles of liquor.

It is charged that many young men have been attending the dances with a bottle on their hip, from which they pour liquor into soft drinks served to them, and in many cases persuaded the girls with them to drink liquor in the same way.

The federal agents swooped down on the dance halls, ordered the music stopped, and the dancers to stop "as you are," and then proceeded to make a "feeling search" for liquor. Some of those caught with the goods on them managed to drop the bottles on the floor before the officers reached them, but it was reported that many of them were taken into custody. How many dance halls were raided was not learned, but it was said that several places near the south end of the lake were visited by the officers.

The county road and bridge committee and superintendent of highways have let the contract for the paving of 1,000 feet on Grand ave., at the viaduct of the St. Paul railroad. Darrow & Barron, Waukegan, got the job at a bid of $8,004.30, this price not including the cement, their figures being those of the Pickus Enneering & Construction company, of Grayslake. It is expected work will be started immediately on this important and urgent improvement.

Miss Carrie Chard of Libertyville has returned from a month's trip to New York city and New Jersey. While there she was a guest of Mary B. Cleveland, manager of the town hall and executive secretary of the school of politics. She was also a guest of Frank LaForge, the well-known pianist and composer. Miss Chard was given a box for herself and friends at the LaForge concert at Aeolian hall in New York in July.

E. O. Rowe & Son's store, at Hebron was robbed a week ago Thursday night, sometime after midnight or early Friday morning. It is not thought that the robbery could have taken place until after 1:30, as too many people have reported having been about, up until that time, and did not see or hear anything out of the ordinary on that night.

Entrance to the store was gained by taking out a pane of glass in the only west rear window, through which a man or men crawled to the rear room.

As near as can be estimated and from invoices and an examination of sales records, it is possible that $1,500 worth of merchandise was taken.

Work on two large fish hatcheries in East St. Louis and Yorkville has started and at least three more will be built this summer, according to William J. Stratton, of Ingleside, chief warden of the state division of game and fish.

Excavating machines are now at work throwing up retaining levees at St. Louis and Yorkville, which will impound the artificial lakes necessary for the work. The lakes will be filled by spillways to the river when the work is completed early next month.

"Adult bass will be introduced in the lakes this fall, Mr. Stratton said, and next spring millions of fingerlings, or young bass, will be ready for distribution in Illinois waterways. The hatchery at Spring Grove in one season turned out approximately 30,000,000 wall-eyed pike, 20,000,000 lake trout, more than 1,000,000 each of sunfish, perch and bluegills and 1,500,000 of silver salmon, besides smaller numbers of several other varieties. More than 5,000,000 bass were artificially produced and distributed by the Spring Grove plant.

"The lakes will be so distributed that the whole state can be supplied with young fish at a minimum loss in transportation. Locations for all of them have not been definitely picked, but we intend to build one near Rockford soon.

"The demand for fish for stocking streams and private lakes and reservoirs has been so great that our facilities were entirely inadequate, but, with the added capacity which our new bass lakes will give us, we hope to be able to supply all of the waters of the state with stock.

"The young fish will be taken from the artificial lakes next spring and distributed by our special fish car, which has a capacity of from 40,000 to 60,000 adult fish or 150,000 fingerlings.

Of Interest to the Farmer

Illinois farmers did not earn enough last year to pay 5 per cent interest on their land and equipment, let alone paying them a wage for their work. This statement is the result of 233 representative farm records kept by farmers in College of Agriculture of the University of Illinois and their local farm bureaus.

A summary of the records shows that the earnings on these farms slumped last year to the point where the owners lacked $12 of getting anything for their labor and management after a fair amount of interest had been deducted.

These results confirm the generally recognized fact that farmers are going through a severe depression, according to H. C. M. Case, head of the farm organization and management department of the college. The records were kept by farmers who were willing to keep good farm accounts throughout the year and their earnings probably are better than those of the average farmer in the state, he pointed out. The records were kept in J. D. Davless, Kane, Hancock, McDonough, Woodford, Ford, Jersey, Clinton, Monroe, Wabash and Gallatin counties.

The farmers of 58 Illinois counties are keeping abreast with the dictates of medical scientists by testing their cattle for bovine tuberculosis, thus helping to make milk more healthful.

Of the 102 counties in Illinois, 58 are now conducting area testing (the map shows 57 testing, Hancock county having voted to test after the map was completed); 18 are conducting educational campaigns; 25 have not yet started and one, Edgar, is accredited. The fact that Edgar county has completed its testing and has become accredited in compliance with federal and state regulations, brings a cash bonus of ten cents a hundred pounds from the large packers on all hogs bred, fed and raised in that county.

Farmers in an accredited county also have the satisfaction of knowing that they are not so liable to be feeding unprofitable cows because the testing culls out most of the sickly liabilities. A third benefit comes to the farmers in an accredited county who produce hogs or cattle for breeding purposes because such animals from an accredited county are known to be free from the dreaded disease and therefore sell more profitably.

The 58 counties now testing represent an increase of 19 counties since January 1, 1924, when only 39 counties had taken up the work. Dr. F. A. Laird, state veterinarian, Springfield, is in charge of the state-wide testing and J. J. Lintner of the United States Department of Agriculture is the federal inspector in charge.

Eradication of bovine tuberculosis is proclaimed by doctors to be one of the most progressive humanitarian steps now under way in this country. Illinois is testing approximately 50,000 cattle a month and is taking the lead among all states. As a result of the testing in these 57 counties, about 90 cattle are condemned each day in Illinois. Through the federal and state appropriations for tuberculosis eradication, the farmer stands only one-third of the loss himself, the other two-thirds being borne by the federal and state funds.

Illinois got one-fourth of the federal fund for all states during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924. The map is furnished by the Illinois Agricultural Association, having been drawn up by its tuberculosis eradication, department, M. H. Peterson director, to show the progress made by Illinois farmers in bettering the quality of milk for the consumers. The Illinois Agricultural Association, the state farm bureau organization, has helped put across tuberculosis eradication work in 48 of the 68 counties now testing.

Keep That Confidence!

Ever since the beginning of the world, CONFIDENCE has played a tremendous part in the preservation of peace and honor.

Individuals, communities and nations filled with confidence in each other find true contentment and good feeling. Through this confidence, they are of mutual benefit to each other. Just as soon as that confidence is destroyed, that which was productive is gone and all concerned suffer.

Confidence is the basis of business today. Confidence is responsible for the great credit system in the commercial world.

When you buy merchandise or service from a business man of Antioch, you get credit because of his confidence in you. He BELIEVES in you. He knows that you have built up a character and reputation that DESERVES his confidence.

KEEP THAT CONFIDENCE! Keep it for your own sake, as well as for the sake of others. Pay your bills promptly! If circumstances arise that you cannot take care of your obligations at the promised time, be frank with your creditor. Let him know that you are remembering his faith in you.

It is only through all of us keeping faith with each other that the granting of credit is possible. Let's create and maintain a "good pay" reputation for Antioch. Let us BUILD in this community with CONFIDENCE!

We, whose names are signed below have confidence in the people of Antioch, and ask them to justify this confidence by keeping their credit in good standing.

Announcing the NEW BALLOON Type SNUBBERS

The new Gabriel Balloon-Type Snubber, for use with balloon and low-pressure tires, is, we believe, the greatest advancement in 20 years toward greater motoring comfort, riding ease and safety.

The increased spring action and the greater upthrow which result when balloon or low-pressure tires encounter unusually large road bumps, are now for the first time, scientifically and thoroughly controlled.

At the same time, the new balloon-type Gabriel Snubber is so constructed that it permits absolutely free play of both spring and tire for their own absorption of small irregularities on apparently smooth roads.

In response to the demand of the public, the motor car manufacturer, and the tire manufacturer, Gabriel has produced a balloon-type snubber to meet the exacting requirements of balloon and low-pressure tires.

Gabriel is the only spring control device officially, by patent and copyright, entitled to the name Snubbers. Go to the authorized Gabriel Snubber Sales and Service Station. Motor car dealers also recommend Gabriel Snubbers and many install them as well.
